Spurgeon's Early Life and Calling

Born in 1834, Spurgeon grew up in a devout Christian family in East Anglia, England. As a young boy, he exhibited a precocious gift for preaching and delivered his first sermon at the age of 15.

Spurgeon's calling to the ministry was confirmed during a powerful encounter with God at a revival meeting in 1850. He described this transformative experience as "being born again in soul."

Ministry in London and Beyond

In 1854, at the age of 19, Spurgeon became pastor of the New Park Street Chapel in Southwark, London. His sermons quickly gained a reputation for their eloquence, theological depth, and passionate delivery.

Within a few years, Spurgeon's congregation had grown so large that he had to move to a new building, the Metropolitan Tabernacle. This massive auditorium could accommodate over 6,000 people and became the center of Spurgeon's ministry for the rest of his life.

In addition to his preaching, Spurgeon was also a prolific author. He wrote numerous books, articles, and commentaries that have become classics in Christian literature.
