In this beginner's guide to Feng Shui, you will learn the basics of this ancient art. You will learn about the five elements, the bagua map, and how to use Feng Shui to improve different areas of your life.

The Five Elements

The five elements are the building blocks of the universe. They are wood, fire, earth, metal, and water. Each element has its own unique qualities and characteristics.

- Wood is associated with growth, new beginnings, and creativity.
- Fire is associated with passion, energy, and transformation.
- Earth is associated with stability, grounding, and support.
- Metal is associated with strength, clarity, and precision.
- Water is associated with flow, adaptability, and intuition.

The Bagua Map

The bagua map is a tool that is used to divide your home into eight different sections. Each section of the map represents a different area of your life, such as health, wealth, relationships, and career.

To use the bagua map, you need to first determine the front door of your home. This is the door that you use most often to enter and exit your home.

Once you have determined the front door, you can place the bagua map over the floor plan of your home. The front door will be at the bottom of the map, and the back door will be at the top.

The eight sections of the bagua map are:

- North: Career
- Northeast: Knowledge
- East: Family
- Southeast: Wealth

- South: Fame
- Southwest: Relationships
- West: Children
- Northwest: Helpful People
